NOTES AND COMMENTS

The only way to get anything done is to start doing it.

An expert is an individual willing to venture an opinion.

Freedom of speech is not valuable unless somebody will listen.

Some people pay their debts and others forget them, if they can.

The plague of columnists is sweeping over the nation like the locusts of old.

It is up to the fault-finder to propose a remedy for the ills he discovers.

West Liberty will be a better place to live in when you become a better neighbor.

What has become of all those people who were worrying about technocracy?

Almost everybody plans to do some kindness, sooner or later, but most of us die sooner.

Adults who expect children to exercise their caution are as foolish as their children.

1940 is only one-third gone but most of the year's resolutions are 100 percent gone.

The late spring has nipped many budding poets in the bud, where they ought to be nipped.

Here's to Morgan county farmers; may they have successful crop years and get good prices.

The rewards that come from free work are what one might expect, if looking for rewards.

This newspaper, like all others, makes some mistakes; how do you manage to avoid them?

The average individual thinks his problems could be easily solved if his income increased enough.

The radio test is succeeding the movie test but nothing has replaced the old-fashioned brain test.

As a newspaper man we are heartily in favor of the union demand for more pay and less work.

You can put it down as a fact that the British nation will not go in for appeasement in the early future.

The United States is full of people who think that the Declaration of Independence was signed on July 4th.

Nearly every American thinks he is a writer except the men and women who have to make their living writing.

Wonder how those Americans feel at Tsientsin, bowing to the Japanese sentries in order to get into the foreign concession?

Justice may not be secured in courts but the record of the courts for justice compares favorably with justice sought outside.

Everybody seems to agree that there is something the matter with the United States but no two individuals suggest the same remedy.

The airplane may be superior to the battleship but it makes little difference to the men on a sinking warship or the crew of a crashing plane.

A war correspondent doubts if the belligerents intentionally drop bombs upon civilians; this must be encouraging to the Norwegians hunting shelter.

Having "sunk" practically the entire British navy, the Germans will soon report the destruction of all British ships under construction or planned.

What Europe needs, it seems, is more generals; and judging from the comment on this side of the water, every street corner has several likely prospects.

War lies, like all others, are of two kinds, as for example, (a) lying to conceal losses for strategic purposes and (b) telling a small neutral nation that you will not invade its territory when you have already made up your mind to attack the next morning.

NORWAY ABANDONED

British and French troops have been withdrawn from southern and central Norway, leaving all the country except in the extreme north in German hands. The small and scattered Norwegian forces were unable to hold out any longer after they were abandoned by the allies.

Thus again, as in the case of Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, the promised British help to a smaller nation was "too little and too late."

Probably the Nazis will soon complete their conquest of Norway by driving the British out of Narvik, an extreme northern port.

However, a British news agency reported that King Haakon of Norway has declared in a proclamation to his people that "in northern Norway we still occupy strong positions and from here we shall succeed with help, which is now being planned, in reconquering the rest of the country."

Meanwhile, the Chamberlain government in England offered various excuses for the British failure in Norway, including fears of developments in the Mediterranean and of German attacks on England herself. "I do not think the people of this country yet realize the extent or imminence of the threat which is impending against us," declared Prime Minister Chamberlain. "Presently we may be faced in the most violent form with attacks directed against this country."

A Nazi spokesman remarked that when Chamberlain said this "he spoke the truth."

English freedom of speech was exemplified by outspoken criticism of the government in the house of commons. One member declared, "Somehow or other we must get a government of fighting men of fighting spirit." Another said: "Time is not always on our side; Hitler took the old gentleman by the beard on this occasion."

Your guess is as good as ours as to just where Hitler will strike next, but we are safe in saying that as soon as Norway is fully under control another neutral nation will be invaded without warning.

MY LOVING MOTHER

God lent an angel to the earth; she came in lowly guise, but she was beautiful to our own eyes. She swept and dusted, cooked and darned, for all the heedless throng, and ever as she worked she hummed a little tuneless song.

She always had a healing word for people in distress, and though her hands were worn and rough, their touch was a caress. At last her hair grew thin and grey, her work took overlong, and oftentimes we did not hear that little tuneless song.

God lent His angel to the earth to ease its frequent strain, but when he saw how tired she grew, he took her home again. We missed her almost everywhere, for with our opened eyes we knew at last just who she was: an angel in disguise.

BEREA CLUB CHAIRMAN

County chairmen selected by Mr. Ford, in addition to the Morgan county chairman are: Henry Martin, Floyd county; Walter Brown, Pike county; R. H. Thomas, Martin and Johnson counties; Paul H. Gambill, Lawrence county; and O. J. Arnett, Magoffin county.

STAMPS FOR COTTON

The food stamp plan—under which persons on relief are given allotments of foods of which a surplus exists—continues to expand. It has apparently proven to be a reasonable way of disposing of some of the foods held by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

Now, according to a recent announcement by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, stamps are to be issued, under a similar plan, for cotton. A tremendous cotton surplus now exists, and its reduction is essential to the welfare of the millions of families which depend for all or part of their livelihood on income from raw cotton—and that legion of workers which depends on cotton processing and manufacturing for their jobs.

One extremely significant phase of the stamp plan is that it has been entirely carried out through existing private merchandising channels. The taxpayers have not had to dig down to pay for the creation of a costly government-owned distribution system. Both chain and independent stores have cooperated to the limit in furthering the plan, and have apparently done a magnificent job. The unemployed have benefited—and so have the producers. And the plan unquestionably tends to keep the cost of maintaining relief down.

The cotton plan is to start on a small scale, and be extended, as was the food stamp plan. And America's private merchant, big and little, may be relied upon to see it through with maximum efficiency.

THE FARM AND HOME

Oven temperatures should be moderately low for roasting all meats—300 degrees for beef, veal and smoked pork; 350 degrees for fresh pork. Long, slow cooking develops to the full extent the rich flavor of meats.

Newly set trees are not capable of utilizing fertilizers until new root development has taken place. In fact, fertilizers may injure young trees. Manure, however, may be used safely as a mulch, and will benefit trees after they begin to grow.

In feeding cow's milk to an orphan lamb, begin with one to two tablespoonsful every two hours from early morning until late at night. After three days, gradually increase the amount, and the time between feedings.

It is wise to provide extra capacity, in planning water systems for farm homes. Twenty gallons of water a day per person is none too much. If livestock is included, 12 gallons a day is the minimum per horse or cow.

Indian pudding recipe: Scald 4 cups of milk in a double boiler. Add a third of a cup of cornmeal slowly, stirring constantly, and cook over water for 20 minutes. Stir in one cup of molasses. Pour the mixture into a buttered baking dish and bake two hours in a moderate oven. Serve with top milk.

Kentuckians Eat Millions of Eggs

No one knows yet what the present census will find, but the last one (a sort of mid-term affair made in 1935) found that in Kentucky there were produced yearly 39,705,459 dozens of eggs. Some of these eggs are sold to out-of-state markets, particularly in the east. The major part, however, are consumed locally. Fully 90 percent of Kentucky's farms have small flocks producing eggs sold locally or consumed at home. The main problem now, according to the Kentucky college of agriculture, is to get the flocks into more constant production to provide eggs the year around.

Homemakers Study Safety, Remedies

Members of homemakers' clubs in Pike county are studying "first aid" and "safety in the home." Among other things, this includes remedies, medicines and drugs. People do too much self-medication, take too many questionable remedies, consume too much stuff that is improperly labeled, the women are being told. Then homemakers of Pike county are learning what to do in case of accident and sudden illness. Miss Lucille Skidmore, assistant home demonstration agent, says there are a large numbers of accidents on farms. She believes every farm woman should know what to do while waiting for the doctor to come.

PASTURE AFFECTS PROFIT

Records kept by 99 sheep raisers last year, in cooperation with the Kentucky college of agriculture, showed gross returns per ewe of $8.04 in Owen and Grant counties, $10 in the central bluegrass region of the state, $8.46 in Larue county and $9.53 in Meade county.

The income per ewe varied chiefly because of the difference in pasture, feed and quality of ewes and rams. The flock owners excelling in net returns raised a large number of lambs by selecting good ewes for breeding and by saving a higher percentage of the lambs. They sold heavier lambs by having them born in January and February, by keeping the ewes that were good milkers and by feeding ewes and lambs when necessary.

THE GARDEN
BEANS AND SWEET CORN
By John S. Gardner,
Kentucky College of Agriculture

Despite the backward season Kentucky has been more or less enjoying, many gardners have managed to make their first plantings of these two delightful vegetables, but the summer program is still in the making. The worn "program" is advisedly used, for, if either of these is to be had in their prime, plantings must be systematically made, to fit the schedule by which the family can use them.

For beans, such a program would be to plant every two weeks enough row to supply the family with beans for two weeks; from records gathered throughout the state, an average would seem to be 10 feet per person.

However, supplying the summer table is not all a good garden must do; there should be a surplus to can for the winter. Again, consulting averages, and assuming that canned beans are to be served three times in two weeks, and that a serving is three-quarters as large as in the summer, four of the plantings should be because of the somewhat exaggerated fear some gardeners hold for the Mexican bean beetle, they try to grow their canning beans early, before this insect becomes numerous. However, if faithful effort is used, particularly with respect to times of spraying, the Mexican beetle becomes quite as tractable as those whose control has long been considered easy. The canning surplus may well come from the June and July plantings, doubled.

The stringless sorts, Stringless Greenpod and Full Measure may be used throughout, or if a variety is desired with more character, Refugee (1000 to one).

As for sweet corn, much the same applies; it stays at prime for only a short time. Unlike beans, however, a succession of sweet corn may be had by planting all at one time a number of varieties with maturing times different.

Assuming that the Early Adams now planted will serve for the first corn, it is well to plant now the whole summer's area, using Black Mexican or Spanish Gold, Golden Cross Bantam or Kings Cross Bantam, Golden Rod or Bantam Evergreen, Aunt Mary's and Stowell's Evergreen. They will mature in the order named, possibly overlapping a bit, to assure a continuous supply of top quality corn until frost. Canning may be done from any variety, and, on an average, the canning-planting should be done about one-third that for the whole summer. Just how large the planting of corn should be depends on the family's liking. From the records gathered, no workable "average" can be made. However, the yield may be calculated at 1¼ ears per stalk, and plantings made accordingly.

The most serious bean pest, the Mexican beetle, has been named; the way to control it may be described here, shortly. Sometimes early beans suffer from insects that chew roundish holes in the foliage. These, likely the spotted cucumber beetle or the Southern bean beetle, are easily stopped by spraying with magnesium arsenate.

The worst pest on sweet corn is the corn ear worm. In good time, a control developed at the Kentucky experiment station may be described in these columns.

MORE TOURIST TRAVEL

Detroit, Mich., May 4.—New records for tourist travel in the Americas in 1940 were predicted here today by officials of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, authoritative statistical body for the industry. Nearly 60,000,000 Americans will be taking to the highways during the summer months, the organization believes.

Unsettled conditions abroad, combined with expanded facilities and accomodations in the great national parks and other tourist Meccas, were cited as reasons for the statement.

"This has been rightly termed 'Travel America Year,' " the A.M.A. announced. "It seems a safe prediction to say that a new all-time high mark will be set by vacationists this summer."

"Next to his own interest in the trip, the motorist's chief concern is for his car," adds Ed Hedner, national director of service for Chevrolet. "Once the tourist leaves his home town, the service problem presents itself in a new light. Chevrolet owners, however, need have no qualms along this line as they 'See the Americas Now,' for nearly 9,000 dealerships from coast to coast provide expert, factory-trained and supervised service.

"Chevrolet's national service program annually reaches more than 27,000 mechanics all who have access to factory methods and factory-approved tools and equipment. The standardization of service that has been brought about through this country-wide training system is the motorist's insurance against any mechanical clouds on the travel horizon."

WASHINGTON NOTES

Campaign Funds

The senate committee to investigate campaign expenditures announces through Chairman Gillette that it will check up on funds being spent by presidential candidates.

WPA

A million and a quarter workers left the WPA in the last twelve months, says Col. F. C. Harrington, head of the WPA, presumably to return to private employment.

Railroads

The nation's leading railroads report a net operating income of $115,107,752 for the first three months of this year, which compares with $85,959,925 in the same period of last year.

Income

Income payments to individuals during the first quarter of 1940 were five percent above those for the same period of 1939. The total for this year was $17,570,000,000, according to a department of commerce report.

F. D. R.

President Roosevelt has been pronounced in "perfect physical shape" by his physician, Rear-Admiral Ross T. McIntyre. Weighing 185 pounds as he left Warm Springs, the president seemed to have recovered from his attack of influenza.

Economy

It is safe to say that there will be no "economy record" in congress this session. Earlier exhibition of economy sentiment in the house, at the start of the session, has been followed by a generous disposition in appropriating the taxpayers' money.

Wheeler

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, will be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination if President Roosevelt declines to run for a third term. The Montana senator made it clear that he did not think the president would run.

Housing

Thirty-one local housing authorities will sell, during the first half of May, $126,000,000 of temporary loan notes payable in six months, in connection with housing projects, ranging from $180,000 for Helena, Montana, to $10,000,000 for New Orleans.

Shipping

Despite the war American shipping to foreign ports has risen since the outbreak of hostilities and American ships, in the first two months of the year, carried 30 percent of the total tonnage. This compares with 15 percent in the same period of 1939.

Naval Air Base

Two hangers for patrol planes are nearing completion at the new naval air station at San Juan, Puerto Rico. The new link in the Atlantic defense scheme has been put into commission. It is the first of the air bases recommended by the Hepburn board and authorized by congress in 1939.

Texas

Reports from Texas indicate that the delegates from that state to the Democratic national convention will be for Mr. Garner but that the vice president will definitely abandon his "Stop Roosevelt" movement. The compromise was worked out by Texans in order to assure harmony in their state convention.

Planes

Airplane exports to Europe in the first three months of 1940 were valued at $66,816,208. Exports in March totaled $20,735,688. The shipments consisted of 148 land planes; 19 land planes minus engines; 43 land planes to be assembled; 290 engines; and various parts and accessories to the value of not quite $4,000,000.

Seized

It is reported in Washington that American military supplies on their way to Sweden and Finland have been captured by the German invaders of Norway. While no official disclosure has been made, newspaper correspondents understand that submachine guns, trucks and some planes were seized by the Germans at Bergen.

REVIVAL MEETING AT INDEX

Rev. Martha L. Archer of Vancleve is holding a revival meeting in the church at Index. Miss Archer is called of the Lord in evangelistic work and is a preacher of the full gospel, which delivers from all sin.

The services begin at 7:10 o'clock every evening. This revival will continue through the 19th of May and longer if the Lord sees fit. Everybody welcome to the services and we trust you will take advantage and get in on this "feast of good things" from the Lord.

Pray for the meeting and come out.

Navy Second in Under-Age Tons

Comparison of Sea Forces Shows Strength of United States.

WASHINGTON. — The United States navy as of November 15 ranked second in total "under-age" combatant tonnage, but fifth in the number of under-age ships, the department revealed in making public pictographs, as support for the contention of Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, that a big navy is needed to repel a possible hostile coalition. In under-age tonnage our navy on November 15 was smaller by about 180 tons than the combined fleets of Germany and Japan. In number of new ships Japan and Germany had 305 units compared with 150 for the United States.

The principal reason for our low rating in total number of combatant ships is said to be the preponderant number of submarines and destroyers in some of the other navies where such craft are of particular value.

Possible Coalition Weighed.

It is the possible coalition situation which stands out more than any other one thing. In the event Japan and Germany allied themselves and attacked us simultaneously, a development envisioned in some quarters, the United States would be able to put on the sea modern under-age units of a total tonnage of 1,021,270 tons as against a combined tonnage of such units for Japan and Germany of 1,021,451 tons, or virtually an equal amount.

In battleships the Japanese have nine and the Germans five, all under-age, a total of 14, the combined tonnage being 354,070. In number of such units the United States also has 14.

In aircraft carriers the United States has in commission five units of an aggregate tonnage, all under-age, of 154,000, as against six for Japan of a combined tonnage of 113,470 and two for Germany of 38,500, or 151,970 for a Japanese-German coalition.

The United States has in commission 18 heavy and 15 light cruisers of a total tonnage of 294,875 tons, while the Japanese have 12 heavy and 15 light units of a 205,355 tonnage. The German strength is 55,600 tons, of which two units are of the heavy and six of the light category. The superiority of the United States, measured against Germany and Japan, is 33,720 tons.

Under-Age Destroyers.

In under-age destroyers the American total is 55 units of an aggregate tonnage of 85,910 tons as against 84 destroyers of a total tonnage of 113,476 for Japan and 34, of 46,466 tons for Germany. Add Italy and the tonnage is increased by 98 under-age destroyers of an aggregate tonnage of 110,107 tons.

In the matter of under-age submarine strength the United States has 27 units of 41,120 tons while Japan has 35 of 52,432 and Germany, which features smaller units, has 71 of 31,282 tons. The combined submarine strength, measured in under-age units only, of Germany and Japan is 84,190 tons, more than twice that of the United States.

New tonnage actually under construction for the United States, including eight battleships, totals 491,860 tons. The known Japanese total, including four battleships, is 268,660 tons, while that of Germany, including three battleships and about a hundred submarines, is 266,988 tons, a combined tonnage exceeding that for the United States by more than 43,000 tons.

For Great Britain the building total, including nine battleships, is 730,095 tons; for France, including four battleships, 271,052 tons, and for Italy, including four battleships, 242,530 tons.

Russian Determines Ages Of Children by Fingers

MOSCOW.—A method of determining the age of children through X-ray photographs of hands is claimed by Prof. V. Kuznetsoff, Soviet medical expert, who was recently awarded the degree of doctor of medical science by the board of the Second Moscow Medical institute.

Professor Kuznetsoff photographed the hands of 558 children and reported that the ages of juveniles between 10 and 14 may be determined almost unerringly through changes that take place in phalanges of the fingers. He is now trying to extend his method to determining age up to the eighteenth year.

Pussy Cat Is Losing Renown as a Mouser

PHILADELPHIA.—After centuries of dominance in the rodent-catching field, the pussy cat is on his way out as protector of the pantry.

And what's more, cats never were good mousers, according to J. C. Kopf, manager of an exterminator company. They're lazy, self-satisfied and too much inclined to fraternize with their traditional nibbling enemies, he explained.

Chemical warfare has supplanted the cat nowadays to an almost overwhelming extent.

Envy Is the Life of Trade

Women's Superiority

Woman is more efficient. She can talk for forty minutes without a pitcher of water on a stand nearby.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Dog-Fish Story

They were boasting about the cleverness of their dogs.

"Why," said one man, "only the other day I dropped a quarter in the river and that dog of mine—"

"Now, now, old man," interrupted the other, "you are going to tell me that dog jumped in and fetched the quarter out, eh?"

"No, better than that; he dived in and brought out a dime's worth of fish and 15c change."

Puzzled

One of the greatest mysteries of nature is the narrow, crooked, rough and tortuous path a dollar has to traverse to get to you and the wide, well-paved and inviting way that is there awaiting its departure.—Fort Worth Record-Telegram.

WHY ALWAYS SUCH A HURRY?

This swiftly changing world has sent up our blood pressure.

Time was when our main method of transportation for any distance was the stagecoach, operating on a once or twice-a-week schedule, weather and roads permitting.

One would patiently await its arrival for hours, or days, whiling away the time as best he could. Then, when finally on the way, one could generally depend on live horsepower to make his destination, but at a comparatively leisurely pace, yet one didn't fret about it.

Now what happens? If you miss a single section of a revolving door, up goes your temperature! Then you get into the family car, are held up a couple of minutes by a red light and . . . . . zowie! you grip the steering wheel until your knuckles turn white, you bare your teeth, and . . . . . Heaven help the poor pedestrian! Fortunately, you're usually able to subdue this murderous impulse, but occasionally there are those who don't. Right there's where many accidents start. Off you go, bullying other drivers right and left daring all who threaten your "right" to both sides of the road.

Remember how angry you were the time you followed an old "jalopy" up a hill at three miles an hour? It probably caused you a delay in driving time of fully 30 seconds. And remember that poor chap ahead of you who killed his engine and made you miss the light? You couldn't have helped his peace of mind any by leaning on the horn button like you did. All over the loss of a few seconds! After all, he didn't stall his engine on purpose, did he?

Why all these outbursts of barbarism? For no other reason at all than to give vent to baseless impatience. Nine chances out of ten you weren't in that much of a hurry anyway.

The next time this happens, why not just relax and take it easy? Playing safe may take a few seconds more, but it may mean a longer life.
